

Josh Gaffen

(09/08/2015)

Gafcon, a program and construction management firm that provides efficiency and value added services for a wide range of private, public and education projects, announced the promotion of Josh Gaffen to vice president of client development. In this new role, Gaffen will spearhead client acquisition and engagement initiatives for the firm. Gaffen has held various roles in operations, business development, Information Technology, client engagement, strategic partnerships and program/project management throughout his career. He has been with Gafcon since 2007 and has managed the company's involvement in high profile projects at the Los Angeles Community College District, Los Angeles Unified School District and San Diego Unified School District Capital Improvement Programs, among others. Gaffen's work experience began as a technology consultant on document management and reporting systems for construction, education, healthcare and biotech applications. He has led teams focused on delivering value to clients across a broad spectrum of disciplines.
